Per our discussion [REDACTED] I've written a book proposal as well as a few chapters and need to run it by you as well as RMD and some other folks before I attempt to pitch it to a publisher.

b6 -2

I've asked around about the process of getting approval and from what I see there shouldn't be an issue. I'm not writing about the FBI but rather about security assessments and the folks that perform them.

I was also thinking about making the book into a presentation and submitting to Black Hat folks to see if I can get on their management track in the summer. Again, I would not be talking about my work here but rather providing sage advice on performing security assessments.

The title kind of sums it up "How to Feed, Comfort, and Care for your Ethical Hacker: a technology leaders guide to building and leading Security Assessment Teams"

Can't resist taking the lighter side of life approach.

Anyway, attached is the start of what I was hoping to send out - essentially a proposal and a few chapters. I should finish a draft of the first three by early next week - have a few people looking at it to provide comments.

Oh, if you know any publishers then I'll buy you a starbucks for their email address
